RESOLUTION

Simla-2, the 3rd November, 1977

No. VI (F) IND-1-1/77.—In order to provide suitable guidance to the various agencies concerned with the implementation of Programme; which have impact on Industrial Development of this State it has been decided to enunciate the Industrial Policy of the State in the shape of an Industrial Policy Resolution, as under:—

INDUSTRIAL POLICY RESOLUTION

The Government of Himachal Pradesh accords a very high priority to the development of Industries, as the only means of scientific utilisation of the immense natural resources of the State and as the chief instrument of providing employment to the vast masses of the unemployed and under employed. The priority will be reflected in the allocation of funds to be made in the succeeding Annual and Five Year Plans.

The natural resources of the State are land, water minerals, agricultural, horticultural and forest produce animal products, climate, and an educated and hard working people. Scientific utilisation of these resources would imply that regeneration is given as such importance as exploitation, that the physical methods of exploitation are as scientific, productive and ecologically desirable as technology can make them, that there is a quick but well regulated shift from export of Primary produce of that of semifinished and finished goods, and that the main thrust of industrial policy is to provide self employment based on local resources to local people in their own environment.

Thus the policy of afforestation will be mainly based of the industrial uses to which forest products can be put, forest areas may be given on long lease to industrial concerns with full responsibility and proper safeguards for their regeneration, and allocation of produce controlled or owned by government will be made to deserving parties at reasonable terms and on long terms basis, with suitable penalties for non-utilisation or improper exploitation. The Government will set up large farms for the scientific plantation of medicinal and other herbs and plants. Similar will be the policy in respect of other types of produce.

One of the prime conditions of utilising natural resources for industry will be absence of any deleterious effects on ecology. Industries which cause air or water pollution will not be allowed to be set up. Industrialisation should lead neither to the denudation of the hills nor to soil erosion, nor still to destruction of the tourist potential of the Pradesh.

The chief objective of industrial growth is the provision of employment opportunities. As such, all types of industry would have to possess an employment orientation. Top priority, would be given in all matters to industries with greater employment potential. While labour intensive industries are, therefore, to be given preferential treatment this will not imply a ban on the use of capital intensive techniques in the case of large and medium industries, where there are preponderant economic and technical considerations in their favour.

The existence of under employment on a large scale underlines the need for cottage and village industries, in order to provide employment in the slack season, generate additional income for the poor and utilize local raw material and talent. A net work of such industries, based on traditional as well as modern products will be established in every nook and corner of the State. The infrastructure of design and product development, training, common facilities, supply of raw materials and credit, procurement and marketing etc. will be provided by the Government. A massive campaign will be launched in order to make this sector a prominent and viable sector of the economy.

The process of employment generation should in the main benefit the people of the State. However, the industry will not be discouraged from bringing in outside talent at the technical and managerial level in the beginning, especially if qualified and suitable persons are not available locally.

The various types of industries, that may be set up in the Pradesh will be classified in the following groups:

GROUP-A

Industrial units which are ancillary to existing units or units being established and units producing items where value added is considerable.

GROUP-B

Industrial units based mainly on local resources, including the climate, tourist potential etc.

GROUP-C

Industrial units, based mainly on local demand for the product.

GROUP-D

Industrial units, based mainly on Government quotas of scarce and controlled raw-materials, but which are competitive with outside units.

GROUP-E

Industrial Units, based mainly on outside resources and demand, but which are competitive with outside units.

The above types of industry will be allowed to be set up in the same order of priority as specified above. Industries which are mainly based on Government quotas of scarce and controlled raw-materials, or on outside resources and demand, and which cannot compete with outside units will not be encouraged.

Industries of Groups 'A' and 'B' will receive top priority in regard to allocation of land, sheds, water, power, finance, raw-materials, building materials, import licences, marketing facilities and all other matters by all Departments of Government and Government owned Corporations and statutory bodies.

Industries of Group 'C' will be permitted mainly on the basis of existing and projected demand within the Pradesh. They will rank next in priority.

Industries of Groups 'D' and 'E' will have the lowest priority. No new units of Group 'D' will be allowed, unless there is first the possibility of increased availability of that raw-material.

From the point of view of scale of industrial units the top-most priority will be accorded to cottage and village industries, followed by small scale industries. Large and medium scale industries will be encouraged, mainly if these fall in Group 'B'. The scope for ancillarization of large and medium scale industrial units will be fully exploited.

There will be a judicious mix of the public, joint, Co-operative and private sectors. The public sector will concentrate on areas where investments are of very high order where the returns on investment are not immediate and where innovation of technology or product development is involved. The Joint Sector projects will be selected with care in fields where there is some striking advantage in marrying private enterprise or inventive talent with Public finance and support. The Co-operative sector will concentrate on the cottage and village industries, in order to organise materials, credit and marketing for them. The remaining area will be the free and untrammelled preserve of the private entrepreneur.

In the implementation of this policy, however, it will be ensured that there is no resultant concentration of economic power in a few exploitative hands. The Government shall try to prevent the emergence of monopolistic industrial houses. Adequate care will be taken to see that industry is established in an atmosphere of free and fair competition.

In this context, and taking into account the dearth of entrepreneurial talent in the State, it shall be the endeavour of the Government to develop and promote, entrepreneurship among the people of the State. For this purpose, an Entrepreneurial Development Institute will be established in the near future. However, now or later, there will be no discriminatory treatment against the entrepreneurs coming from outside.

The State Government has already in force a package of attractive incentives. These will be implemented forcefully, and whenever they are difficult of proper implementation, suitably modified. Not only will the Government explore the feasibility of providing better and more attractive incentives, but it will also attempt to obtain further central incentives for industries to be located in a backward hilly, inaccessible and border area such as Himachal Pradesh is.

Among the important incentives, one is the provision of land at cheap rates. While these rates will be made reasonable and comparable to rates in other States, The Government will also ensure availability of undeveloped land, developed plots and sheds. This will involve the establishment of new and expansion of existing Industrial Areas and Estates in order to cover each district, and to have a proper balance in the industrial development of the various regions of the State. For this purpose, Industrial Areas have already been categorised as 'A', 'B' and 'C' areas covering foothills, interior and tribal areas respectively. Suitable steps will be taken to provide more incentive in the relatively backward areas of 'B' and 'C' categories. Steps will also be taken to facilitate the transfer of land to non-agriculturists, if the land is to be used for industrial purposes. Similar steps will be taken to permit land declared as surplus under the ceiling on Land Holdings Act, 1972 or acquired under the Himachal Pradesh Village Common Lands (Vesting and Utilization) Act, 1974 to be allotted for industrial use. Government will also frame uniform policy for transfer of land owned by it in its various departments, at reasonable rates, if the land is required for industrial use.

The supply of cheap and uninterrupted power is known to be the single biggest factor attracting new investment into any area these days. Government will ensure that uninterrupted supply is maintained to industrial units to the fullest limit of technical feasibility. The overall availability of power will also be maintained, by strong and day to day co-ordination between the Industries Department and the Electricity Board, and by long term perspective planning for each industrial areas, growth centre and point. The pricing policy for industrial power will be such as to maintain reasonable rates over long periods. The tariff will be for overall charges, inclusive of minimum consumption charges and expenditure on transmission lines, sub-stations, transformers etc.

It shall be the constant endeavour of the Government to develop facilities for road, water, rail and air transport, for posts and telegraphs, telephones and telex etc. Availability of fast passenger and goods transport at reasonable rates would also be ensured.

Credit is the lifeline of progress. The Government shall attempt to provide sufficient funds through Banks, Financial Corporation and other financing agencies so that no worthwhile, industrial enterprise suffers for want of funds. Quick availability of finance will be assured by joint appraisal and approval by all the financing institutions.

In the crucial field of marketings, various steps like establishment of quality control and marking centres, marketing through the Himachal Pradesh State small Industries and Export Corporation, fair price shops and co-operative consumer stores, supply of market information, sale through Emporia of the Government and Corporations located within and outside Himachal Pradesh and holding of exhibitions will be taken. Special emphasis will be placed on the production of consumer goods, to be sold, as far as possible, under common brand names. Various steps will be taken, as and when necessary, to afford special protection to locally manufactured goods.

As far as Government purchases are concerned, maximum preference will be given to locally manufactured goods in all purchases made by Government, Government owned Corporations and other statutory bodies. Price preference will be allowed on the basis of detailed costing and through costing committees.

It is the considered view of this Government that Himachal Pradesh is a very backward, hilly and inaccessible area and in case the Central Government is serious in implementing its policy of redressal of regional imbalances, the following main steps need to be taken by it immediately:—

- (a) Establishment of a Resource Development Institute, which can do research into the various raw-materials available, identify and develop the products which can be manufactured from such raw-materials, ascertain the appropriate technology especially in view of the stress on generation of maximum employment and produce better designs for traditional products.
- (b) Establishment of several public sector projects on large and medium scale, based on cement, paper watches, electronic equipment, vanaspati etc.
- (c) Declaration of the three remaining districts of Himachal Pradesh (Bilaspur, Mandi and Simla) as industrially backward and declaration of special incentives on capital cost subsidy, transportation subsidy etc. for such hilly and backward areas; and
- (d) Development of air and rail transport, post and telegraphs, telephone and telex etc. on social rather than purely economic considerations.

In conclusion, it may be said that the State Government is extremely keen that industrial growth should take place on the lines indicated above. The declaration of good intentions, is, however, never sufficient. In order to ensure that these intentions are actualized in practice, the Government has framed several co-ordinating bodies, such as the Industrial Project

Approval and Review Authority, the Industrial Extension Teams at State, District and Block levels and a full-flaged Industrial Assistance Centre in the Industries Department. The attempt is and will be to take quick decisions in a co-ordinated, cogent and cohesive manner, so that the industrialists do not have to run from pillar to post, and all services are provided to them under one roof.

It is with this assurance that the Government of Himachal Pradesh invites entrepreneurs from all over the country to start industrial ventures in this State. It is with this hope that the Government of Himachal Pradesh calls upon the people of the State to rise and meet the challenge of progress and change".

USHA MITTU,
Deputy Secretary.
